THE RAILROAD INQUIRY.

The Courts to Determine the Extent of the Commission's Power.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 1st.—The investigation of the affairs of the Central Pacific Company by the Federal Commission was continued to-day. James Z. Yost, formerly Private Secretary to Governor Stanford, tested his knowledge of the books of the Contract and Financial Company, when they were packed into boxes and sent to San Francisco, at the time the ship to San Francisco, the railroad rods were removed to the Bay. The witness said he had never paid out any money by direction of Senator Stanford, and that he had been told by the Legislature that Senator Stanford appeared with him in the office of the Commission and asked him to give him a bill for $100,000.00
for the purpose of sweeping this way, he had done so, and that he had been told by Senator Stanford that he had been told by the Legislature that Senator Stanford had employed him to present the country to the Legislature for the purpose of getting a bill for $100,000.00.

Francis M. Brown and Frank W. Northery were interrogated this afternoon by the Grand Jury, and both admitted that they had been paid $100,000.00 by Senator Stanford, and that he had been told by Senator Stanford to present the country to the Legislature for
the purpose of getting a bill for $100,000.00.

John C. Leavitt, a member of the Central Pacific, was called to testify, and he said he had been told by Senator Stanford to present the country to the Legislature for
the purpose of getting a bill for $100,000.00.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Why Brown Battered Henley.

The fact that the merits of this case were to be considered yesterday morning in the Police Court crowded the Court-room with spectators. The prominence of the contestants in business circles directed attention to the case. Mr. Hart was the prosecuting attorney and Mr. Gott appeared for Mr. Brown. A jury was impaneled to try the issue. In obtaining twelve good men it was developed that Sacramento business men and women knew a law unto themselves when it came to the question of justice. Peter Finch when questioned as to what he would do to a man who would insult him, in addition to refusing to pay a long delayed debt, promptly replied, "I might knock him down if he tried to hit me, but I'd knock him down anyhow if my temper got up." J. Tranchard had tried to collect one or two bills with such muscular personage, but had got his money back, and thought it did right. Mr. Brown, giving his opinion of lawyers, thought they were as good as anybody. S. Poska would write the sidewalk with a man who would not pay his bill, and referred to the appearance of his left eye as a moment of the little unpleasantness.

After getting a jury Mr. Gott gave his version of the difficulty, in which he said that on the evening of July 27th, about 9 o'clock, he went to the State House to see Mr. Henley, a partner in business, whom Brown was engaged with—none more nodded to Brown, indicating that he wanted to see him, and passed on to the billiard table, standing there with hands on the pockets of his coat. Mr. Gott stood up. A conversation ensued with both Brown and Henley that he had treated him shamefully and had outraged him; told Henley that he had struck him in the face in several other places; Brown was very angry.

Mr. Gott desired a full explanation of all matters between Henley and Brown, but Mr. Henley failed to take the management of the case out of Mr. Gott's hands, and thought Mr. Gott was treatable.

Mr. Henley denied that he had told Mr. Huntout that he would kill Brown, but showed a pistol on the evening of July 27th, and Brown, the night and heard Henley say, "Don't you see me?" and immediately Brown struck him.

B. Brown, the defendant, stated that Mr. and Mrs. Henley had roomed at his hotel, and when he asked them why he had asked Henley repeatedly for money, and had come to the conclusion that he was lying to him in making promises to pay. The evening of the difficulty, Henley had said he had been talking to F. R. McLaughlin, his law and legal adviser, and told him that he had asked Myer to take his sister away, as he could not afford to board her any longer. An angry dispute ensued, and for a part Henley went to knock him down. After Henley had gotten up, defendant had furnished towels and water to staunch the flow of blood when Mr. Huntout said that he would fix him (Brown) to-morrow.

After a short argument by the attorneys on the connection between a board bill and a case of battery, the case was submitted to the jury, and after an hour's deliberation returned a verdict of guilty.

Board of Supervisors.

MONDAY, August 1, 1887.

A full Board met at 10 A. M. A communication was received from F. M. Smith, relating to building a bridge near New Hope; read and filed. The claim of G. T. Boyd for $1 71 Justice's fees was allowed.

The King Iron Bridge Company communicated with the Board relative to an extension of time in which to make and execute a bond for the construction and repair of Folsom bridge. Ten days' time was granted.

A communication was received stating that operations had commenced again in the Hill Top mine. It was referred to the action of the Board.

Mr. Morris advised that the Clerk be instructed to communicate with the Board of Supervisors of San Joaquin county and send them a copy of the McMullen resolution recently passed, and inform them that they will proceed in the matter. This Board will be so informed.

The request of the Assessor for an additional deputy was considered and filed.

On motion, Mr. Finley, Commissioner for Road Dist. No. 1, reported that a communication was received from F. M. Smith, relating to building a bridge near New Hope; read and filed. The claim of G. T. Boyd for $1 71 Justice's fees was allowed.

Committee No. 3, on Water Works, reported a synopsis of which appears elsewhere in the Record-Democrat. Fifty dollars was appropriated for the work suggested in the report.

Committee No. 3, on Irrigation and Graveling Streets and Alleys, reported progress. The report was accepted, with the exception that the suggestion made in the report have been submitted to the consideration of the City Trustees.

Committee No. 4, on Shade Trees and Landscaping, reported very early that the committee was considering the formation of a compulsory ordinance in relation to the planting of shade trees around all residential property. The committee was investigating the subject of stones or concrete pavement and other matters of interest, and would be able to report some thing definite soon.

Committee No. 5, on Driveways and County Roads did not report, owing to the absence of Chairman Galatin.

After a short argument by the attorneys on the connection between a board bill and a case of battery, the case was submitted to the jury, and after an hour's deliberation returned a verdict of guilty.
